MANSAS CITY IN MOURNING. Parts of the City Devastated by a Cyclone-

Ed. Register-On last Sunday afternoon our city was visited by a cyclone—the first it has experienced, though hard winds and mock cyclones do some little damage every year. About three o'clock in the afternoo we of the famed corner of Ninth and Muiberry were gazing at the magnificent spec. get dinner and make the train. I tacle presented to us to the northward, wished to have a talk with you on a dred shade trees set out along the streets of probably six or seven miles distant, where subject in which you and I and all cyclone was spending its fury. Whilst we were congratulating ourselves on our nartrees are being stripped of their leaves by row escape from his funnel-shaped majesty, and commenting upon the probable damage he left in his train, our attention was called to another cloud forming at Armordale, which lies a little south of west from here. At first slowly, then more rapidly, it formed, and, when it seemed to have gathered all its forces, it started on its march of dealing to rich and poor, high and low, along its line, its terrible curses. On it came, and crossing the Kaw river commenced its deeds of wickedness by killing a poor boatman, Joe Burns by name. Ever and anon it rose high in the air only to descend again to mother earth to mark its path of destruction. Taking a northeasterly course, it did little serious but I find that if you have you do not damage in the bottom, excepting the killing of Burns and the leveling of some houses. On nearing the bluffs, however, it seemed to gain new strength, and demolished most ruthlessly many of the fine, comfortable homes which line the bluffs. Onward it pressed, and going from Sixteenth and Penn and Fourteenth to Grand Avenue, it marked its path-but too plainly-by unroofing houses, moving them off their foundations, and seventeen drivers, left Madison county last injuring many people. At Fourteenth and Grand Avenue, it visited each of the corners and in quick succession demolished the buildgress of the city. Crossing Oak street, the cyclone, as though it were an infernal agent from the depths below, totally ruined the new and elegant German Evangelical Church, -all of Stoddard county-eloped on the 7th which had just been completed at a cost of $35,000. All the houses facing the park from Oak to Locust streets-or, rather, their absence-were made to tell of the ferociousness of the wind, and a "sprout" did service to several from Thirteenth to Fourteenth The Alton South Missourian says: "Men, streets. At Locust his majesty rose again property from Cherry to Holmes. > the chilled hands of poverty. A walk or drive through the district visited fills one with awe and horror. Fortunately, the evelone was only from one to three hundred feet wide, and the damage was not what it might have been. As it is, about one hundred buildings were totally destroyed and about three hundred rendered untenable. The newpapers, with their usual care-tulness of the business of the city, place > these figures considerably lower. Only three deaths were reported; but to day Madame Rumor has it that many more lives were sacrificed. Still it is wonderful that more persons were not killed and wounded.

> We at the aforementioned corner were perfectly safe, and looked on the ravings of the storm with impunity, being only two squares away; and there was not enough wind to flap our coat-tails. The sight was grand, and we tried to compute the number and variety of the revolutions made by rafters and other timbers. It was also comical to see the people running, as though mad, to escape the elements. Had we been treated to a midnight visit instead of an afternoon call, many more would have been reaped in the barvest of death. In half an hour a calm eter registered 70°; the evening was extremely pleasant; and to-day has also been so, till within the past few hours it seems as though we will have more rain.

> The Mayor has issued a proclamation, calling a meeting at the Board of Trade Hall tending to the relief of the sufferers.

> Work is being steadily pushed along the line of the great march, and in a few months new instead of demolished buildings will mark it. To many the loss is severe, and will never be recovered from; but it will start a big boom in building.

> Our local weather prophets were taken by surprise by the storm, as there were no warnings, excepting the high winds that prevailed for some time

Business is not very brisk, and merchants have been complaining for some time; still every clearing house quotation shows an increase of from 65 to 100 per cent. Kansas City points with pride to the fact that her clearings are greater than those of Eastern cities of 100,000 and over.

ANNAPOLIS, Mo., May 14, 1883. Ed. Register-It was surely my intention this morning to call upon you at your office on my return from Pilot Knob; but being detained there longer than I had calculated on, I found on my return that I had barely time to other men who have the welfare of our State at heart are interested. It is not long until we must begin looking around for some man to fill the office now filled by Mr. Crittenden-if, indeed, speculation in that direction has not already begun.

We have no lack of men who are well qualified in every particular to fill the office; but as no greater number than one can be elected, we of course must make a selection of one on whom we may unite.

I have watched you, in the REGISTER, to see if, so far, you had any preference; in any way make it public. And I am not sorry, for the reason that I wish, with all the respect and difference justly due you, to present to your consideration a man who is altogether competent, in every sense of the word, and worthy, in every particular, to fill the responsible position of Governor of our State. Having served with him in the Thirtieth and Thirty-first General Assemblies of Missouri, and again in the called session which gave Missouri a solid Congressional defegation that will deal justly with the varied interests of our great State, I feel that I am in a position that enables me to form an opinion founded upon his actual worth and merits; and in presenting this gentleman to you for your candid consideration and, if consistent with your views, your invaluable support, I am most happy to assure you that I do so gry, and unimproving the stated, and without a shadow of any ulterior motive.

> The gentleman to whom I refer is Judge T. P. Bashaw, of Paris, Mouroe county, and editor of the Paris Mercury-I think that is his paper. He is a man of much more than ordinary ability in his profession, having practiced law in St. Louis and in the northeastern part of our State, and before our Supreme Court since 1868. He is a man of fine physical appearanceabout forty-two years of age-and in the very prime of life, both mentally and physically.

Now, my old friend, you are the first gentleman that I have written to on the subject, and I unhesitatingly assure you that you would never find cause to regret it, should you enlist for Mr. Bashaw.

With great respect, your friend and obedient servant,

J. W. BERRYMAN.
